---FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE---

New Mobile Apps from New Orleans Tech allow New Orleans residents to stay abreast of technology news, events

New Orleans, LA (November 2011) – New Orleans Tech (NOLA Tech), a hyper local organization that focuses on technology news, media, and community outreach recently launched iPhone and Android apps. The apps will allow people to stay current on local technology news. App features include a tech articles stream, podcasts, a technology calendar, and listing of every local tech group in the city.

The articles and podcasts section focus on tech news that relate specifically to New Orleans. Individuals can read about a variety of topics that include software, mobile apps, game development or web design. The podcast section allows people to listen to information about local tech related events, interviews, or happenings. If people are looking for an opportunity to see tech events, that can find that in the calendar section, while the groups section allows them to explore the different IT-related organizations they can get involved in.

“NOLA Tech is committed to highlighting the technology community within the city and these apps are just another layer for us to connect that information to those who want it,” said Christopher Boudy, co-founder of NOLA Tech. “Our hope is that people from within and outside the city utilize our apps to stay connected to the New Orleans tech community.” said Boudy.

New Orleans Tech was founded in 2009 to serve as a hub for all things technology related within the city. More information can be found on their website <http://neworleanstech.net/apps>
